From the New York Platform.

"The Democratic party of New York congratulates the people of the State upon the restoration of business confidence and the improvement of industrial conditions which are following the repeal by a Democratic Congress of the panic-bringing laws of its Republican predecessors.

Unsound financial legislation, driving out our gold and threatening a single silver standard; a worse than war tariff, unnecessarily adding to the cost of living, diminishing federal revenues and over-stimulating favored industries at the general expense; profligate expenditures, converting an assuring treasury surplus into an alarming deficit—these were the ill-conceived and ill-fated products of Republican partisanship, which brought the country to the verge of financial and industrial ruin, which wiped out private fortunes, reduced incomes, turned tens of thousands of men out of work, closed factors, destroyed business, brought thousands of deserving poor face to face with starvation, and inflicted general distress upon the American people. The complete transfer of the government to the Democratic party was too late to avert these terrible evils; it could only remove the causes and repair the injury.

We therefore rejoice that by the repeal of the Sherman law for the purchase and storage of silver bullion all fear of a depreciated currency has been allayed and faith has been restored in the ability of the government to maintain a constant parity between its gold and silver coinage; that by the repeal of the McKinley tariff law the inordinate taxation of the many for the benefit of the few has been notably diminished, and in the place of inequitable and monstrous customs duties which have starved some industries and overfed others the tariff schedules have been adjusted so that while affording ample safeguards for American labor they reduce the price to the people of necessities of life and encourage the promotion of industry by cheapening the cost of many raw materials used in manufactures, and that by reduction in expenditures wherever possible and by provision for additional revenues the legitimate demands upon the federal treasury will no longer exceed the government's income and necessitate an increase in the public debt.

We heartily endorse the honest purpose and high ideals which have characterized the administration of President Cleveland, and we renew to him the pledge of our earnest support in all his efforts to secure the enactment of Democratic measures and the carrying out of Democratic policies. We have confidence that the people of the State by their expression at the polls in November will sustain his administration, and by the re-election of Democratic Representatives in Congress show their appreciation of faithful service and their condemnation of that Republican incompetence which was responsible for the financ al panic of 1893."

Religious intolerance in political discussion is denounced, and any attempt to proscribe candidates for office on the ground of religious belief by secret organizations or otherwise is deplored.

Fruits of McKinleyism.

The recent vast improvement in general business is a source of much anxiety to the Republican leaders, for they know that the people no longer believe in the howl that the Democrats are responsible for the hard times. The financial depression was occasioned by the Republican mismanagement. Read the following from the Phila. Record:

"A protectionist contemporary observes that the Treasury would have been bankrupt but for the sale of $50,000,000 of bonds for gold last February. This is quite true. But the Treasury would not have approached bankruptcy had not the Republican predecessors of the present Democratic Administration created the conditions for it by despoiling the Government of legitimate revenues. This spoilation of the Treasury was accomplished in three ways: first, by abolishing the revenue duties on sugar while maintaining the sugar tax upon the people; secondly, by raising the high protective duties on nearly all articles of import, thus reducing the revenues by discouraging trade for the sake of increasing the profits of tariff-fed favorites; and lastly, by a profligate increase of public expenditures. The authors of this reckless policy now attempt to shoulder the responsibility for it upon their successors in administration.

Industrial panics as well as army panics are of brief duration; but long continued industrial depression like this can always be traced to its direct causes. Chief among these causes was the McKinley tariff with its grievous obstructions to the country's trade, domestic and foreign. While the McKinley law existed there could be no permanent restoration of industrial and commercial prosperity. But with the removal of this obstruction all the arteries of trade and industry thrill with renewed life and energy. In the presence of the many harbingers of a beneficent change the calamity howlers will find it impossible to longer mislead the public. Prosperity is returning on all the wings of industry and is coming to stay."

Return of Industry.

The carpet industry is beginning to feel the touch of business activity promised by the new tariff, and we may soon expect it in full blast. The Kensington mills are making ready for the revival, and their machinery is being prepared to turn out goods. The same is the case with the Manayunk factories. This echo comes from all parts of the country, and from nearly all industries. The pulse of new industrial life is beginning to quicken from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and preparations are making to turn on steam. No one need expect the country's old time prosperity to return at a bound; it will come back as health returns to an invalid after sickness, gradually, and, as with the invalid, if proper care be taken, if business be kept in safe channels and none of the natural laws that govern it be violated, we may expect to witness its full return, and to stay.—Ex.

MOST of the organs of the Republican party have abandoned the job of reducing the wages of workingmen under the new tariff. This is another Democratic victory.—Chicago Herald.

The Voice of the People.

There is an emphasis and a significance in the action of the Carroll county, Md., Democracy, in County Convention assembled, far transcending in importance any mere expression of their personal preferences for a particular candidate for Congress. The contest teaches a moral lesson which should not be lost upon the rest of the State and upon the party leaders everywhere. Carroll county has long been regarded and justly as a stronghold of the regular Democracy. It is so now, for Democracy is never so orthodox or so regular, as when it stands squarely and firmly, without qualification or reservation, upon the party platform as proclaimed at Chicago, in June, 1892, and accepted by President Cleveland and the Democratic House of Representatives.

The Democrats of Carroll have shown themselves to be neither "soreheads" nor "kickers." The resolution which the Convention adopted without a single dissenting vote are an echo of the voice of the Democracy—the voice of the people, that is destined to be heard in every State of the Union. The Convention wisely did not confine itself to considerations that were merely local or personal. It spoke its mind—the mind of the honest farmers and sturdy Democrats of Carroll in cordial indorsement of the administration of Mr. Cleveland, and of the principles of the Wilson bill.

But, the resolutions of the Convention take a broader view of the present crisis in the politics of this State and of the country, and of the duty imposed upon all loyal and honest Democrats, who are such from principle and not for pelf or the rewards that may follow fawning. "We further repudiate," say the Democrats of Carroll, "methods in this State, that deny to the public the right to control their own affairs, and are un-Democratic, unpatriotic, and if allowed to be continued, will result in disaster to the party." The fight is not against individuals—one individual or two individuals. It is against a horrible, corrupt and corrupting system, which has rested upon the party and upon the people like a hideous nightmare. It is against pernicious methods in politics as much as against the men who have profited and risen by those methods. It is a fight for purer politics as well as better men.

The Carroll county resolutions are a faithful expression of the popular sentiment and the popular spirit now abroad in the land. They are good to read—good to cut out and pin in one's hat—and above all, good to live up to and to act upon.—Balto. Sun.

Naturalization Reform.

The ballot is the most valuable heritage of American citizens, and whatever is done to discredit it is a blow at our Republican form of government. The liberal policy as to the naturalization of foreigners was begun when the immigrants to these shores were almost wholly of the Germanic race, the same which had founded the American Colonies. Then no danger was to be apprehended. But, of late years, things have changed: the class of immigrants now flocking to our shores, and, in due time, are clothed with the rights of citizenship, are largely of the degenerate Latin race from the shores of the Mediterranean, the Italian, the Slav, the Hun, and others equally undesirable, because of their ignorance and their low state of morals. Nevertheless, this class are naturalized all over the country, and there seems to be a race between parties as to which shall add the greater number of these undesirable citizens to the voting lists. A reform movement has been begun in this behalf, and some courts have already made their rules for naturalization more stringent. It has produced beneficial results, and the reform is growing. It is not so easy now, as it was twenty years ago, for ignorant and depraved men to become citizens. In this country Judge Yerkes is fully alive to the necessity of purging the ballot box by denying naturalization to improper persons, and will not hesitate to take proper steps to that end. In furtherance of reform in this direction, a number of the most reputable inhabitants of Bristol, headed by the venerable ex-Senator Kinsey, have petitioned the Court to make certain changes in the administration of the Naturalization laws, which, it is thought, will close the gate against the depraved, the ignorant and the vicious. In a government like ours, "of the people, for the people, and by the people," the administration of Justice can be no purer than the source of political and judicial power, the ballot box; if that be corrupted the frame work of government becomes corrupt. The ballot is the unit that has the destines of civil government in its keeping and should be as pure as human agency can make it.—Doylestown Democrat.

Some Excellent Advice.

The Farmers' Voice, which is one of the ablest, best edited and most fearless of public journals, gives some excellent advice in the subjoined editorial, which we ask our readers to give careful consideration:

In all our voting from now until the Fall of 1896, the election of the next President should be kept in view. In our judgment the election of the successor to Mr. Cleveland will very likely be thrown into the House of Representatives, where each State will have one vote. This is an important matter for the citizen's consideration. As we vote we are helping to shape the influences that will determine the politics of the next administration. Now, therefore, as never before for many years, it becomes the duty of every voter to consider the result of his vote well before he casts it. It is possible for the people to determine future political events if they will vote carefully and intelligently. But if voting is done upon the usual haphazard principle, without thought of the future, the next President of the United States may come nowhere near representing the will of the majority. The election of a President by Congress, unless one party is clearly in the majority, would likely mean that the Presidency would go to the party that held the balance of power. It is the patriotic duty of all parties, therefore, to nominate capable men and of all voters to express an intelligent preference at the ballot box. Our politics have become so mixed and the result of elections so indefinite, that the demands of the hour upon all parties is for the exhibition of the purest patriotism and the highest wisdom and statesmanship in their nominating conventions.

A GRAFTED tree at Monticello, Fla., annually bears a crop of peaches, apples, pears, quinces and crabs.

HER PERFECT LOVER.

"I had a perfect lover once," she sighed—
"Yes, just before I married you—
Who listened when I spoke, and tried
To answer all my questions, too.

"So courteous and so kind, so good!
He'd never think a man could be
As thoughtless and indeed as rude
As you too often are to me.

"The jewel of my love once won,
He used to swear could ne'er grow dim.
He would not dream that any one
Could whistle when I spoke to him!

"If he had faults, he kept them hid.
I should have married him? Yes, true,
And that's exactly what I did,
My perfect lover, sir, was—you."
—Chicago Times.

RETURNED AFTER MANY YEARS.

"Six years to-day! What a long time!" sighed Maud Merlin, sinking into the low seat by the window and pressing her sad white face against the glass. "Ah, me, how happy I was, but it is all over. I shall never be happy again."

Her dark eyes overflowed with tears, and her memory went back to the old home of her childhood, the great, rambling country house, with its spacious rooms and blazing fires and large hearted hospitality. She could see the old garden, with its winding borders and cool retreat, and catch the sweet odor of the pinks, and the drowsy murmur of the bees, and there was the woodbine arbor, beneath which she and Harry had sat so often together. How well she remembered one evening above all others—an evening in royal June. The air heavy with spicy odors and a full moon pouring down its glorifying light upon the snowy billows of orchard bloom, and the long hedges of crimson roses, weighed down by their own intense perfume. On that evening she had listened to the story that has been so often repeated, but which never grows old. "Maud, my darling, I love you. Will you be my wife?" She recalled the very words, she seemed to hear his dear voice and see his tender eyes. The betrothal ring was still upon her finger, just as he put it there that night, and beside it another, even yet more sacred, her wedding ring.

And this stormy, desolate night was the anniversary. Six years ago and the old homestead had rung with music and revelry. Every window blazed with light, and every broad hearthstone glowed with flaming logs. For on that night, robed in white and adorned in blossoms as spotless and sweet as her own virgin heart, Maud, sole daughter of house and heart, and beauty and belle wherever she went, became a bride.

Bidding farewell to the old home and the old friends, Maud went forth with her husband, thenceforth and forever to be the light of his home and the inspiration of his life.

One year—one short, sweet, happy year, that went by like some rare, rich, melody, without a single note of discord to break its divine perfection, and then the trouble came. The bare remembrance of it blanched the wife's cheeks and made her breath come in quick, painful gasps. At the close of that short, happy year of her wedded life her husband received information concerning the illness of an only brother residing in California. He was dying of a slow but sure disease and wished to see his brother's face once more. Harry Merlin did not hesitate an instant. The path of duty was plain—he must go. Maud entreated to be permitted to accompany him, but he was inexorable. The risks and hardships were too great.

Left alone, Maud was not the woman to give way to despondency. It was her nature to keep her face to the sun. She kept herself busy with the duties of her household, and at last the dreary days went by, and tidings from Harry came. He was safe at his journey's end, but his brother was dead, leaving Harry, however, the inheritor of a considerable fortune. Just as soon as his business matters could be arranged, Harry wrote, he would start for home. Soon after, a second mail came, bringing intelligence that Harry, in company with quite a party of brother travelers, had set out taking the overland route.

Maud counted the days with throbbing impatience. The parting had been so long. She pined to see his dear face and hear his voice once more. She worked from morn till night, filling the rooms with little ornaments and getting up little surprises against his return. She cultivated the flowers he loved and sang the ballads he admired. Never did woman count the passing moments with such loving expectation. At last the day came. She had received no further intelligence, but she felt sure that he would come.

The evening was in spring, genial and balmy, their little home a wilderness of blossoms. She prepared his supper with her own hands; she adorned the rooms with the flowers he loved and even laid out his gown and slippers and drew his armchair beneath the window. Then she went to her chamber and put on the dress he liked to see her wear—a mauve silk, with dainty laces at the throat and wrists, and jet and gold ornaments, her flossy brown hair held back by sprays of heliotrope and sweet verbena. Surveying herself in the mirror, she smiled and blushed, remembering his words when she had first worn the dress.

"Oh, Maud, you are so beautiful! Always wear this dress, darling, when you wish to please me!"

The May sun wheeled lower and lower and at last went down, leaving the earth wrapped in the dusty mists of twilight. Maud began to grow impatient. She lit the lamps in the parlor and then went out to the porch to wait. He would not disappoint her! The golden tints of the day faded like the colors of a dream. The stars came out one by one in the hazy luster of the sky, and then the moon arose, coming up grandly above the purple steeps. Still he had not come, and the poor wife's heart began to grow sick with hope deferred. Another hour, and then, above the murmurous music of the night, she heard a sharp step upon the gravel and started to her feet, flush and breathless, but the next instant she fell back, pale with disappointment, for the step was not his—she knew that long before the person came in sight. He had advanced toward the porch where she sat with a slow, uncertain step, observing which, and recognizing him as one of her neighbors, she advanced to meet him.

"Mr. Rutherford, is that you? I am looking for my husband. What do you think can detain him?"

The man stood still, his face full of silent, unspeakable pity. Something in his expression caught her quick eyes, and she sprang forward and grasp his arm.

"Mr. Rutherford, you bring me tidings. Speak; don't keep me in suspense."

Still the man was silent.

"Oh, sir," she entreated, "don't trifle with my feelings. Do you know anything concerning my husband? If you do, for mercy sake speak out!"

"Madam, I have heard—that is, there is bad news," he began, his voice husky and broken.

Her face grew as white as death, but her eyes were clear and calm and her hand strong as she grasped his arm.

"Sir, if you pity me, tell me the worst at once. I can bear it."

"Well, madam, your husband and his party have been waylaid and murdered by the Indians."

"All? Did none escape?"

"Not one!"

She turned sharply, leaving him without a word, and he saw her enter the house and close the door after her, and that was the end. He would never come back any more, no matter how patiently she might wait and watch. He would never know that he had a son, never look upon the little chubby face, with its bold, blue eyes and sunny curls, so like his own. From henceforth her heart and home were desolate.

And this was the anniversary of her wedding day. Six years ago, and she was a happy bride. Five years ago she had been a heartbroken widow. Her boy slept in his little bed, and she sat there, thinking, thinking, and gazing at the low leaden sky and the wind tossed trees. The night was closing rapidly—a night of storm and darkness. The rain came down in great smoking sheets, and the wild, wailing winds rushed round the gables and went shrieking over the hills like human souls in agony. Her heart ached with a desolation that seemed almost insupportable. Life was so hard, yet for the boy's sake she must endure and live on.

She looked down at her sable garments with hot, blinding tears. Six years ago, and she was robed in gems and blossoms. His face, his very voice, seemed to come back to her, and she fancied that his spirit must be near her. No matter how high above her, how happy, she knew that he loved her still, and his glorified spirit may have left its home of bliss to keep with her that sacred anniversary. The fancy consoled her beyond expression. She glanced over at the sleeping boy, with a dim hope that his father loved and watched over him. Then a sudden impulse shot across her mind. She would not keep the anniversary of her wedding day in the garments of widowhood; she would put on the robe he loved. If he knew aught of her poor, sad life, he should see how sacredly she remembered and observed his simplest wishes.

Stealing up to her chamber, she took out the mauve silk and dainty laces, growing yellow and timeworn, and a pretty jet and gold ornament and arrayed herself as in days gone by, and the old bloom came back to her cheeks and the brightness to her eyes, and she seemed to drop her years and her widowhood and to spring out afresh into the rare beauty of her early maidenhood. Thus arrayed, she went down softly and seated herself before the blazing fire, her face tearful and expectant. If his soul were near, and she clung to the hope that it was as she clung to life, he should see how tenderly she remembered him.

The anniversary night wore on, wild and dark with storm, and still the poor wife, half dazed by her terrible sorrow, sat by her lonely hearthstone, robed in her festive garments. At last there came a step without, a sharp, impatient step on the gravel, but she did not hear it. A weary, travel worn man, bronzed by exposure and pale with long endured grief, came up to the front entrance and paused beneath the low window. Through the parted curtains shown the ruddy firelight, revealing the warm attractive room—the old, familiar room, with his hat upon the wall and his books and meerschaum on the mantel, unmoved, as he had left them. Revealed the kitten purring on the rug, and the little curtained bed in the distance, and the dear, sweet face, wet with tears, and the dress he loved in happy days, that seemed too far back to the wanderer to be real.

Was it all a dream? Was that the wife from whom he had so long been parted, whose face had been present with him through all his lonely hours of peril and imprisonment? Was she waiting and watching and keeping his home bright for his return?

He left the window, stole softly to the porch and approached the side door. He raised the latch. It opened, and he stood upon the threshold.

Intent upon her musings, her own sweet memories and sad reflections, Maud heard no sound. Her heart was far back with the husband she loved so well. The old dress had revived old associations, and his very presence seemed around and about her. She looked up, with clasped hands and streaming eyes.

"Oh, Harry! Oh, my husband!" she murmured, "if you knew how I love you, how I mourn your loss, surely your soul might speak to mine and tell me that you are near me!"

"Maud, my wife, my darling!"

She started to her feet, with a wondering, startled face. There he stood, worn and weary, changed from the man he had been, but the wife recognized him in an instant. For a moment a solemn awe filled her eyes, and her love hesitated and trembled in the presence of a spirit from the other world, but the next instant she held him in her arms with a wild cry.

"Oh, Harry, my husband! You are not dead; you have come back to me!"

His passionate kisses on her face, his strong arms and throbbing heart answered her as no words could have done. He had come back to her from imprisonment amid the wild western mountains, from perils and dangers and death itself.

For awhile, after she had heard his story and fully assured herself that he was really flesh and blood, and not a spirit, as she had first believed him, she lay quietly weeping on his bosom. Then she arose, with solemn tenderness in her eyes, and leading him to the little couch drew aside the curtains, revealing the little face, flushed and dimpled, in slumber, and the small fists clinched together.

Harry Merlin looked on without a word; then, bending down, he kissed the little sleeper with a joy and thankfulness in his soul too deep for utterance.

And on this stormy night, after weary years of imprisonment amid barbarous hordes, after having endured trials and hardships and almost death itself—this was how Harry came home.—Pittsburg Post.

A Lion Hunt.

Tenacity of Life Displayed by a Wounded Animal.

Next day we were to have an example of the extraordinary tenacity of life of a lion who has not been hit in exactly the right place. Being tired, I turn in early, and at sunrise Arthur returns, having shot one lion, and having seen the first tracks of a very large one, which he invites me to join in following. He tells me that it was a grand sight, the spring of the lion. It was a dark night, and the donkey did not seem to fear the hyænas who were prowling and growling around. Up till 3 the donkey remained quiet, then he suddenly began to quiver, the second after he fell with six hundred weight of lion on his back. The lion had sprung on the donkey's back, digging his claws and teeth into the poor donkey's neck; after slaking his thirst he lay down for the moment, the better to enjoy the feast that was before him. He then leisurely rose and stalked around the dead donkey; at that moment Arthur fired and sent him to join his victim in that land from which there is no return. We breakfasted quickly, both of us instinctively feeling that we have a big day before us, which feeling is increased when two natives arrive with the news that the lion who is still at large, has, during the night, jumped into their zareba, and carried off a donkey, which he had entirely devoured; that he had come a second time and carried off a goat, which he had also eaten. We are on his track in no time, and it becomes evident very soon from the size of the foot that he is a very big one. It is not altogether very easy tracking, as in places the ground is stony; but by patient work about 11 o'clock we come to a nullah, where it's all Lombard street to a China orange that our lion is lying up. It's a big patch of dry grass, so we determine to fire it. The crackling begins, and as I am down wind I get the benefit.

The heat is very great and I am nearly blinded by the smoke, but, luckily for me, I see a long tail high above the grass as the lion bounds along, pointing in the direction of Arthur. He has a difficult runaway shot, the angle being wrong. He fires twice with his 577 and twice with his paradox, hitting each time, but not at a dangerous angle. The lion disappears in the smoke, and we naturally believe after such a fusilade that it's all over but the shouting. We send the shikaries to make a circle round and they return with the news that the lion is still within the circle. We wait about twenty minutes; Arthur is of opinion that the lion is in a bushy place on the right and advances with his two shikaries with rifles full cock up the nullah. As they proceed and are nearly past the bush, one of the shikaries catches a fleeting glimpse of the lion in a bushy place on the left. We now know where we are. To draw him out we order one of our shikaries to fire at random into the bush, we ourselves standing about twenty yards away. Instantly he dashes out straight for Arthur, who fires twice, his shikaries once and myself once, making an absolutely perfect pattern of four bullets in the form of a crescent on his forehead. He rolls back, but is up again in an instant, going, as before, straight for Arthur, who, having only an empty rifle left, lowers it in the hopes that he will catch hold of it and give him time to get out his knife. Luckily, I have one barrel left, and, stepping on one side, I get him lengthways and fire at his heart, and he rolls over dead at Arthur's feet. We find him very large and it takes six men to move him into a good position for skinning.

Only a Waif.

Uncle John Thorpe stood among his flowers one morning thinking how much better they were than the money that bought them.

The front door opened slightly, and there came through the crevice a very small boy, much tattered as to clothes and having streaks of the town dirt across his face.

He saw Uncle John back among the flowers and said:

"Mister."

"What is it?"

"Say, I want a rose," and he held out a penny.

"For a cent?"

"Dat's all I can blow."

"You'd better let me give you a carnation. It looks just as well in a gentleman's buttonhole," with a smile.

"No kiddin', mister. I ain't wearin' flowers. It's for me pardner."

"Your partner?"

"De kid dat's always been wid me. He's out in t'e hospital, and I t'ought he'd like to have a rose."

Uncle John picked out the rarest and sweetest rose of all and took the penny. The boy went away with the great nodding blossom hugged against his torn waist, and Uncle John was left with the reflection that there are some things in the world as beautiful as flowers.

It was a week later when the door again opened, and the same tattered boy, his face unnaturally clean, came in and once more found Uncle John at home among his flowers.

"Mister."

"Hello, there! The boy that bought the rose. How's your partner?"

"Dat's what I came in about. He's dead."

"That's too bad."

"Say, mister, do you make dem 'Gates Ajar' t'ings for to put on coffins?"

"Yes, sometimes."

"Well, t'e boys have chipped in for one, and here's t'e stuff." And he opened his right hand, which was heaping full of pennies and nickels.

Uncle John gathered together the coins and counted them. The total was 76 cents.

"We t'ought for dat we could get somethin' purty nice fer t'e kid."

"Yes, indeed. Come this afternoon."

The boy went away undeceived. Uncle John as he wired together the green strands and the rich clusters of bloom again reflected, and his reflection was that the gates must be ajar for such "kids."—Chicago Record.

HIS ORDER.

The College President's Injunction Was a Difficult One to Obey.

The speaker who has planned an address for a multitude, and finds himself confronted with but a single auditor, sometimes fails to readjust his remarks, and the result is apt to be ludicrous. A little story illustrative of this point is told in connection with a former president of the University of North Carolina.

One day, as this dignified and stately personage was walking about the campus, he observed an unlawful assemblage of students at some little distance. He did not hasten his steps, but proceeded slowly toward them with his head down and his eyes apparently bent in contemplation of his own boots.

When this leisurely proceeding had brought him to the spot where the students had been gathered, only one young man remained, the others having precipitately departed.

The president raised his head and surveyed the solitary culprit with apparent severity, although the young man always contended that he detected a twinkle in his keen eyes.

"Sir," said the president in a commanding tone, "instantly disperse to your several places of abode!"

Difficult though the feat required certainly was, the young man executed it to the best of his ability by "dispersing" without further delay.

Little Courtesies of Life.

It is a pleasant thing, when one is going through the world, to bestow little courtesies, or do little kindnesses for those with whom we come in contact; but it is not every one who has the faculty of doing these things gracefully. An incident in a street car the other day illustrates the aptitude of some people in meeting emergencies, and the ease with which they grasp the situation. A lady entered the car holding up her dress to avoid stepping on the trimming, which had broken loose and was dangling some distance below the edge of the skirt. Adjusting her belongings as best she could, and putting the trimming in proper shape, she began a search for a pin. The belt, the edge of the dress, the collar—every place where a pin might have been found—was examined, but to no purpose. The threads that held the trimming were then pulled up and tied as snugly as possible, and she gave up in despair and settled herself to the idea that the trimming must drag until she could get to some place where the needful repairing could be done. A pert youngster across the car grinned and enjoyed her embarrassment. A rather dashing looking young woman transfixed her unfortunate sister with her eyes and smiled in an insulting fashion. A middle-aged man evidently a dyspeptic, exchanged glances with his friend, and all told the situation was not particularly comfortable. Just then a man rose from his seat, passed down the aisle of the car, halted just long enough to offer the lady some pins, touched his hat and was gone in an instant. There was more genuine good will in the act than all of those disgruntled spectators could feel in a lifetime. The man was a stranger, and the lady scarcely caught sight of his face, but she knew without any further evedence that he was a gentleman.—Elmira Budget.

Encouraging a Fellow Man.

I was waiting on the platform of the cotton compress for Colonel Green to return from the post office, when along came an old colored man whose wool was snow white, his back bent over like a hairpin, and his knees so stiff that he could just hobble along by the aid of a cane. When he came up, he pulled off his hat, got a brace for his legs and began:

"Look a yere, white man, I wants to ax yo' a queshun."

"All right. What is it?"

"I wants yo' to look me all ober an den tell me what my aige am."

"Don't you know it?"

"'Deed, sah, but dat war down yere mixed me all up, an I dun forgot my aige. I'ze axed de folkses around yere, but dey trifles wid me. Jist look me ober an be honest about it."

"Well, you are a pretty old man," I said, after sizing him up.

"Yaas, I'ze gittin' 'long in y'ars, I reckon."

"You have probably passed 60?"

"Yaas, I believes I has, but how fur hev I got on de odder side?"

"Some folks might call you 70."

"Reckon dey might, but what's your opinyun?"

"My judgment is that you are somewhere from 80 to 90 years old. Perhaps 85 would be about the figure."

"Am yo' honest 'bout dat?" he anxiously queried.

"I am. I'll bet five to one you are not over 85."

He dropped his cane to reach out both hands and clasp one of mine, and there were tears in his eyes as he murmured:

"Lawd bless yo', white man, Lawd bless yo'! I'll name de werry fust chile arter yo', eben if it's a gal."

"But, hold on! What's going to happen?"

"What's gwine to happen? Why, sah, I knows a woman up dis street who'll marry anybody less'n 200 y'ars ole, an befo' de sun goes down we'll be jined together an makin' our bridal tower on a street kyar. Eberybody dun said I was ober 400 y'ars ole, but yo' has hit de mark an incouraiged me, an if yo' am in dis town to-morrer I'll stuff yo' full of de biggest, richest watermillyon eber growed in de stait of Alabama an let yo' kiss de bride to boot!"—M. Quad.

A LITTLE GREEN.—During a strike on the North British railway, much difficulty was experienced to find the necessary engineers to keep the necessary trains running. One of the substitutes, a young fellow, ran some distance past a station, and then, putting back, ran as much too far the other way. He was preparing to make a third attempt, when the station agent shouted, to the great amusement of the passengers: "Never mind, Tammas; stay where you are! We'll shift the station."

NICE Old Lady—"Will you kindly tell me if the lady who writes "The Mother's Page" in your paper is in? I want to tell her how much I enjoyed her article on 'The Evening Hour in the Nursery."

Taken for a Ghost.

Many years ago an Irish student, having obtained a traveling scholarship at Oxford, went abroad to see the world, of which he knew little. Crammed with the classics, he had not the slightest knowledge of any modern language save English.

On landing at the sleepy town of Ghent he put up at an old many-passaged hotel and sallied forth in the evening to see the town. Shortly after 9 o'clock he returned to the hotel through streets ominously silent. He found the doors shut and saw no signs of life within. After making noise enough to rouse the "seven sleepers" he heard the sound of some one moving within.

The door was stealthily unbarred, and some one—whether man or woman he could not tell—holding a dim oil lamp reluctantly gave him admission. Then, barring the door and muttering unintelligible sounds, the figure disappeared. The guest yelled for the waiter and was answered by a mocking echo.

He groped his way up the creaking staircase and felt along the passage till he came to an open door. Thinking it the door of his room, which he had left open to guide him, he entered. A shriek was heard, and a gruff voice called out in French, "Who are you?" He retreated and heard the door angrily shut and bolted.

In a little tinder box he had some cigar fuses and a wax taper. He lighted one of the fuses, but before he could apply the flame to the taper it went out. After exhausting his stock of matches and filling the passage with a strong sulphurous odor he was left in the darkness of despair.

He regained the staircase, descended it and found his way to a subterranean passage. There suddenly he heard a piercing shriek and then a fall like that of a carpetbag. A rushing of many feet was followed by a light.

The feet were those of waiters and chambermaids. The fall was that of a plump English lady's maid. The bearer of the light spoke English, and from him the stranger learned the cause of his rescue.

The fruitless attempts to light his taper had covered his fingers with phosphorus from the matches. His gesticulations had rubbed the phosphorus over his clothes, and in the dark passage he glowed with unearthly light. The lady's maid's nerves were upset, and she went into hysterics. Having explained these facts, the waiter showed the guest to his room.—Phila. Times.

Westminster Electric Lighting.

The first blast of the steam whistle in the new plant of the Electric Light and Power Company of Westminster was heard last Wednesday. Steam was gotten up during the night in order to test the engine and boiler and everything worked satisfactorily. The wiring of the town is going on rapidly and the company expect to be in full operation by the middle of October or perhaps sooner.

HURT AT CARLISLE.

Ex. Sheriff L. F. Grenwalt, of York while driving "Big York" at the races at the Carlisle fair, last Wednesday, the animal in some manner fell, throwing the sheriff heavily to the ground. Two of the other drivers, not being able to stop in time, ran into the sheriff and his team lying in the track. "Big York" became loose, took fright and ran around the track at a terrific rate of speed eight times before he was captured. The sheriff was carried off the track in an unconscious condition but revived in about ten minutes. He was cut about the head and breast.

WONDERFUL PACING.—If two-minute trotting is still in the distance, two minute pacing seems to be approaching at rapid strides. At Terre Haute, Ind., Robert J. made the unprecedented record of 2.01½. He made the first quarter in 0.30¾, the half in 1.00¾, the three-quarters in 1.30¼. The middle half of the mile—from the first quarter to the last—was thus made in the phenominal time of 59½ seconds, or at the rate of 1.59. The pacer came home strong, and went under the wire with the apparent courage of the first quarter.

ALL the stock of the Hanover Telephone Company has been subscribed for and the Board of Directors have called for the first assessment of ten per cent.

MRS. JOHN D. Richter, of Berwick township, sold 816 quarts or exactly 25½ bushels of blackberries the past season.

JOHNSTOWN FLOOD SUITS END.—The organization of business men to prosecute the South Fork Fishing Club to recover damages caused by the flood of May 31, 1889, has disbanded, having received an opinion that they could not recover. A large fund on hand was turned over to the hospital, and all proposed suits will be abandoned.

THE young American bicyclers who made a tour of the world were granted an unusual honor when they completed their journey through China. Viceroy Li-Hung-Chang sent for them, and accorded them a long interview, which they will describe in the October number of the Century. Messrs. Allen and Sachtleben gave one of the best and most vivid descriptions that have yet appeared of the man whom General Grant included among the three greatest statesmen of the day, and the article is accompanied by a new portrait of the prime minister from a photograph which he presented them. Li-Hung-Chang questioned the young men not only as to their journey, but asked their opinion on international politics, especially as to the territorial policy of Russia. There will also be printed in this number of the Century a posthumous study by Major-General James B. Fry on the character and career of General McClellan. General Fry believes that the latter's usefulness as a commander was impaired by the fact that his mind was possessed by the belief that he was the "divinely ordained saviour of his country."

FOR THE LEGISLATURE

In another column will be found a likeness and a short biographical sketch of the lives of each of our candidates for the Legislature We take pleasure in recommending these gentlemen to the voters of the county and ask all Democrats and those who would have our district well represented in the Legislature to vote for them

Legislators should be broad minded men who understand general business affairs and the needs of the people, especially the needs of the men who make up a large proportion of our population—the farmers Both of these gentlemen have been farmers and know what legislation agricultural interests require.

That the farmers' interests are not protected by the Republicans, either in State or federal legislation, is generally known, and that their advancement must come through the Democratic party the farmers are beginning to discover A settlement of the road and tax questions must be decided by Democratic influence, for the Republicans have done nothing for the farmer in these matters, and have shown themselves incapable of settling the questions to the satisfaction of the people The sway of Quay, Cameron and others in Pennsylvania must be broken and it can be done by Democrats only, for the Republican party is wholly within their grasp

Our candidates are Democrats and have always been Democrats They represent their party and the people and will make fair-minded and efficient officers in whose hands we can safely trust the interests of our county and our people Let voters think on these matters before casting their votes, that we may have the best men in high positions.

THE man who says that his one unpardonable sin was voting the Democratic ticket once is scarcely the right kind of a gentleman to have in the Legislature, and he should stop asking Democrats to vote for him

---

GET your tax receipt as soon as possible if you have not already attended to the matter Don't lose your vote on account of a small sum of money

THE GOVERNMENT FOR THE PEOPLE

It looks as if Mr Milleisen is a Cameron man, and if he is, he should not receive the support of the people, for one man has no right to control nor to attempt to control the Legislature of this great commonwealth A perfectly fair question was asked of Mr Milleisen by the voters of Cumberland county as to whether or not he is in favor of Mr Cameron Thus far we have not seen in the papers any answer to the question A candidate should not be ashamed nor afraid to express his views or his intentions, and Mr Milleisen should answer the question Voters have a right to know for whom and for what they are voting, whether for Mr Cameron or for the people of the State

EVERY man on the Democratic ticket is worthy of the votes of the people Let the citizen be represented in our legislative halls, not a few business interests Industrial questions talked of and thought about for years, have finally demonstrated to the people that the Republican party, long in power, has become a party of class and corrupt in principle, having consideration for money rather than for honesty Let every man think of the questions when he casts his vote We are prepared to say that the Republican party has shown its corruption in this county Direct and unqualified falsehoods have been and are being told, calculated to do injury to Democrats Fortunately they are being exposed

---

Procession Did Not Arrive

The Carlisle Sentinel said yesterday

'The Republican gubernatorial procession was due at Gettysburg to-day but at the eleventh hour the faithful over there sent word to Philadelphia to the effect that it would suit the Adams county Republicans much better if Hastings and his party would call later in the month It is now very doubtful if the Adams county people will see anything at all of this grand pageant

HASTINGS IS ONLY A TOOL

Whatever may be Hastings' majority in the approaching election it will be neither an endorsement of that gentlemen's fitness for the office to which he aspires nor a vindication of the policy of protection, says the Patriot, of Harrisburg. High tariff has nothing whatever to do with the election of a Governor He will have no share in the making of tariff laws and has no influence in framing them. As a factor in the passage of such laws he is no more important than a Ward Constable, the fitness of a candidate for Gubernatorial honors can be ascertained only by his promises to the people as to how he will execute the laws. Hastings has made no promises. He has not pledged himself to enforce the laws now on the statute books or those soon to be placed there He has not declared that he will oppose the corruptionists, the schemer and the jobber. He has not made a specific promise of the performance of any specific duty. Is he already in the hands of the schemers who are controlling his campaign? If not why does he not come out boldly and make his intention known? Why does he not say something about Pennsylvania and stop talking about the tariff for awhile. If he has any individual strength let him show it.

A LEARNED CHARITABLE AND HONEST MAN

We take pleasure in writing this article in reply to a question asked by the editor of the Star and Sentinel in last week's issue We are solicitous of the election of Judge McClean for many reasons

In the first place it is expedient that the man whom the people elect to the position of Judge must be if he is to fulfill his duty well learned in the law and in the practice of it None other than a man of studious habit, who has a mind adapted to close research can know the law and none other than a broad minded man can rightly administer it It is conceded by most of the gentlemen of the bar that Judge McClean is the most proficient and most learned lawyer concerned in the practice of the law in this county and it is acknowledged by all that he stands high in the rank of Judges in this State This qualification we take to be among the most vital considerations which are now before the people, demanding the most earnest attention

As the law leaves much to the individual judgment of the Court, especially in criminal cases, the character of the Judge ought to be such as to give him an appreciation of the rights of people that he may understand the leniency which the law often allows In other words a Judge ought to be a man of charitable disposition In his private capacity as well as in his judicial position Judge McClean has always shown a liberal spirit such as belongs to a kind hearted and charitable gentleman It is well known that he has always liberally responded to any request for help by anyone in need A man in high position must understand the rights of his fellows and grant them a fair consideration

Financial concerns must not have any influence over the Court That there may be no room for question the Judge should not hold position in outside business corporations which may have suits before him A Judge should be untrammeled in his opinions His judgment should be made up without even a question of personal financial consideration Judge McClean is entirely free from any connection by which he might be controlled holding no outside position When he was elected one of the Trustees of Pennsylvania College he resigned for the reason that he believed that his office as Judge prevented his holding any other, even though it be one in which the likelihood of conflict would be very remote

For these and other reasons which we have before stated we advocate the election of Judge McClean We have said nothing in this article about Judge McClean's political views believing that his personal character and qualifications will give to him a large majority of the votes of the people It is scarcely necessary for us to again state that he has been a life long and staunch Democrat for almost every man in the county knows this fact We believe that the election of Judge McClean will be for the best, by far the best of Adams and Fulton counties

NOTWITHSTANDING the assertion of a certain ambitious person who has been circulating through Fulton county there is no law in the State of Pennsylvania by which a district Judge can be pensioned after he has served a certain number of years 'Falsus in uno falsus omnia'—Fulton Democrat

---

PAY YOUR TAXES'

OCT. 6, LAST DAY'

EVERY voter of Pennsylvania should well consider the important issue of tariff reform and cast his vote resolutely for his convictions in the selection of Congressmen

The West Chester Republican says "There has been much activity at the Spring City Glass Bottle Works The firm has more orders than it had this time last year"

The Uniontown Genius of Liberty (Fayette County) says The improvement in business under the new Tariff act is noticeable in different lines Farms for which there were no buyers under the McKinley law are now in demand

The Bridgeton canning factory (New Jersey) paid out $8,000 in wages on Saturday Over 3 000 tons of tomatoes were packed last week, for which the farmers received $21 000 There will be more than $50 000 in wages paid out in Bridgeton canning factories this season and the farmers throughout Cumberland county will receive fully $200 000 for their tomato crop

The Bradford Era Republican says "There is no doubt that business is reviving in a general way From all directions improvement is reported Trade journals that deal with various industries cite renewals of manufacturing while the cessations are few"

The boom in the textile industry is indicated by the following from Wade's Fibre and Fabric Boston 'Many of the striking weavers at Brown & Ackroyd's, Lawrence, Mass, have returned to work and the mill is being run day and night as usual The Norfolk hosiery mills, Winsted, Conn are running 13 hours a day An as instance of the growth of the South it is stated that where the new cotton mill of the Courtenay Manufacturing Co, has just been built at Neway, S C, only about a dozen people lived there a year and a half ago Now about 700 people make up a well organized township"

Lewistown, Me, Sept 24—Notices were posted in the Bates mill last week stating that, on October 1 the mills will commence running sixty hours a week For some time past the mills have been running on short time

Elwood, Ind, Sept 25—The McBeth Lamp Chimney Company has put 100 more hands to work on the night turn making chimneys The plant will now be run day and night at its full capacity in order to keep up with the great demand

The Detroit News says 'The abolition of the wool tariff will be a great boom to the Felt Boot Company of Hastings, enabling them to get free foreign wool that is indispensable to their manufacture"

The Settle (Washington) Press says "The mill of the Mount Veron Lumber and Shingle Company is now running day and night, and cuts 2 0,000 feet of lumber daily"

The Buffalo Times in noting the revival of industries which are being daily reported, forcibly says "Seldom a day now fails to furnish its quota of news of factories starting up and new ones building, of improved trade among merchants, of sawmills failing to close because of the free lumber provision, of mines starting up notwithstanding the reduced duty on ore, of foreign manufacturing plants removing to the States, and other indications that the Democratic good times have really struck the country with a positive boom This furnishes a kind of campaign argument 'hat the calamity howlers will find it hard to reply to"

The Niagara Falls letter in the Paper Mill and Wood Pulp News, September 27 says "Just before I started for the depot to take my train I met the 'Judge' of the Manufacturers' Paper Company He had just returned from Boston. He says The business outlook throughout the country is improving hourly We are in receipt of letters form our branch offices in Cincinnati St Louis, Chicago and San Francisco every day, and I must say they are quite encouraging All our customers are increasing their orders for paper We have reached the lowest point of the ebb tide"

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES FOR THE LEGISLATURE.

CHARLES H DUTTERA

Our candidate for Assembly, Mr Duttera was born near Littlestown, July 9th, 1859 His father William Duttera, was a farmer and tanner He received in his youth only a common school education, but through close observance and by reason of a naturally quick mind has become one of the best informed men of his neighborhood In 1880 he was joined in marriage to Miss E L Rebert a daughter of Mr Edward Rebert, of Union township Some time later he purchased his brother's interest in the tanning business and opened a stone quarry on his father's farm In 1887 he purchased the farm on which he now resides Mr Duttera's business operations have been well conducted and useful both to himself and his community He is and has been since he has entered business a man of influence in Littlestown and in the affairs of the Reformed Church in that place, of which he is now one of the office holders He has been instrumental in the making of a number of improvements in and near Littlestown having built several houses on his land for the accommodation of the laborers of the B F Schriver & Co, Canning Factory, to which company he sold his farm, as it was found to be more convenient for their business He is now engaged in the coal business and owns a good farm near Littlestown His business transactions have indicated that he is a man of good judgment, who is able to manage his affairs in a practical way He is a man of sound and moral ideas and a believer in the principles of true Democracy He has the confidence of his neighbors—the best indication of a man's worth He supports the principles which his party advocates and will be a member of the Legislature in whom we can place our confidence

JOHN W SMICK

John W Smick was born in Huntington township Adams county Pa, in the year 1851 and is now in the forty third year of his age He is the son of George Smick a native of this county, who followed the occupation of farming during his lifetime and was highly respected by all who knew him and was a staunch Democrat Our candidate has been engaged in the occupation of farming all his life with the exception of 3 years when he followed the milling business Mr Smick is now farming and is residing in Huntington township, near the place of his birth He has been a staunch Democrat ever since he cast his first vote and is an acknowledged leader of the party He has missed but one local or township election since he was 21 years of age and on that occasion he was unable to go to the polls on account of sickness Mr Smick is a sober industrious and kind hearted gentleman He is pleasant and genial toward his fellowmen and has many warm friends In the past he has held many of the most prominent town ship offices which he filled with credit to himself as well as to his constituents He has a good common school education, and is a good scholar and a forcible speaker He is possessed with good judgment and is well informed on most of the topics of the present day In 1893 Mr Smick was elected a delegate to the State convention and he has attended most of the conventions held in the county for many years He deserves the support of the voters of Adams county and will make a fair and able Representative

NEXT NOVEMBER

The solid and steady movement in every section of the country toward industrial and commercial betterment is a stronger argument for the continuance of Democratic administration than can be put into written or spoken form It has infused the rank and file of the party with new hope and courage The resolute, audacious and intrepid movement in New York, by which all factions have been fused under the strong leadership of Senator Hill, has also proved a source of inspiration to the minority party in Pennsylvania There will be an undoubted surprise in store for their opponents when the vote shall have been counted after the battle in November. —Phila Record

EVERY man ought to be willing to pay his taxes, especially when neglect or refusal to do so causes the loss of a vote.

DEMOCRATIC SOCIETIES TO MEET.

The General Assembly of the Democratic Societies of the State has been called to meet at Altoona on October 12 The call is signed by Chauncey F. Black, president of the Democratic Society of Pennsylvania, and James A Stranahan, Chairman of the State Democratic Committee It is promised that the Democratic candidate for Governor, William M Singerly and his colleagues on the State ticket, will be there

HOW TO DO IT

There are just as many Democrats in Pennsylvania as there ever were. Let each one make it a point to get to the polls himself, and then let him make another point by seeing that his neighbor gets there In this way the whole party will "get there," and then we shall see how the expected 200 000 majority for Hastings has gone glimmering —Pittsburg Post

---

OCTOBER 6, is the last day in which the payment of poll tax will qualify a voter for the exercise of the suffrage at the November election

Republican Fraud Exposed.

Republican election frauds in Harrisburg were exposed last Saturday when Jacob Young, the Republican judge of the primary election in the Third precinct of the Eight ward, was convicted of falsely counting the returns Jordan Burrows was cheated out of the nomination for assessor

Senator Hill Nominated

The Democratic Convention which met at Saratoga last Wednesday, nominated David B Hill for Governor amid great enthusiasm As soon as it became known that Mr Whitney decided not to accept the nomination his friends turned to Mr Hill who received a unanimous vote After the regular routine business Mr Reynolds, of Allegheny county, arose and said Mr chairman I desire from Allegheny county to put in nomination our first and only choice, David Bennett Hill"

In an instant there was pandemonium Delegates were standing on chairs crowding the aisles rushing towards the platform and yelling themselves hoarse, tossing hats and canes in the air and shouting, Hill" "Hill" Senator Hill stood pounding the gavel his face pale and his lips shut He hammered vigorously but as he did so the din increased After five minutes of this remarkable scene there was some order restored and Senator Hill said 'I am grateful to the Democrats for this showing of their good will and their faith but I cannot accept the nomination you offer me'

Delegate Cockran then got on the platform and delivered a brief but strong speech in favor of Hill's nomination urging that though Senator Hill did not desire the nomination his sense of duty should compel him to accept it

Senator Hill vainly tried to restore order after Mr Cockran had spoken and during a lull in the proceedings the latter jumped upon the press table directly in front of the platform and waving his arm for order said All in favor of the nomination of David B Hill will say aye"

There was a perfect howl from five hundred throats Contrary no shouted Cockran, and there was not a voice Turning to Senator Hill he said Now Senator we summon you to your duty

Mr Hill received [illegible] which were all of the votes cast

To Save the State Forests

In discussing the suppression of forest fires State Forestry Commissioner [illegible] rock said, last week

'The reason more prompt means are not taken by the authorities to suppress forest fires in the State is simply because it is too big a problem for the counties The law requires the County Commissioners to appoint persons to fight out the [illegible] who start these fires, but it also provides that such service shall be paid for by the counties themselves This is a gross injustice first because it places the heaviest burden on the weakest counties which have the largest woodland area and the smallest population from which to raise taxes and secondly, because the State at large is as much interested in the suppression of these fires as the counties are

'The remote timbered hills must continue to be the sources from which the water comes that maintains the life and industries in the more populous parts It would bankrupt the treasury of Pike county for example to suppress all the forest fires which originate in it [illegible] to its limits yet that county is one of the most important watersheds of the State

Another Jap Victory

A dispatch from Shanghai says it is reported there that the Japanese have succeeded in entering the Chinese province of Manchuria and that they are advancing upon the capital Moukden

It is also said that fighting has taken place between the invaders and the Chinese at a town between that city and the frontier

The engagement is said to have ended in a decisive victory for the Japanese who it is said established themselves in the position previously occupied by the Chinese

The general public of Japan is in favor of continuing the war against China in defiance of all obstacles and it is urging that a desperate attack be made on Pekin

All parties feeling for the time will be suspended Reinforcements are continually going forward but nothing is known in regard to their destination

A dispatch from Paris says that last July a provisional agreement was reached between Russia and China regarding the future action of Russia in the Pamir It is agreed by the two countries that the forces of neither power shall pass the Sarikul range

This agreement is reported to be [illegible] relations between Russia and China and is an important bearing upon the [illegible] tunes of China in the present struggle

ABOUT THE HORSES

A Pennsylvania correspondent says in a business letter 'J C Tower, of Gettysburg, Pa, is the owner of the two year old colt Malvolio, purchased from the Allen Stock Farm last winter He is in training at the Engletree Stock Farm and he trotted last week a mile and repeat in 2 52, 2 48, after only a few weeks handling They expect to drive him a mile in 2 40 by the first of October a good showing for a green colt"—[illegible] Breeder

Flying Jib hitched to a running mate paced a mile in Chillicothe Ohio on Saturday last in the phenomenal time of 1 59½ lowering the record of 2 01¼ made by Westmont in Chicago in 1884, at this style of racing, by 2½ seconds

The Power of Rapids

'One evening some of the men ran down from their camp to tell us that a York boat was coming down the main channel Here the rapids are as fierce as those of Niagara, and no boat has ever been known to come down safely I do not know when I have seen anything that so strongly impressed me It was a huge black boat carried off by the flood [illegible] with a capacity for perhaps eight tons of cargo and a dozen men We could see it coming afar off, hurrying down, riding the smaller rapids so well that we thought she might possibly run the larger ones But as she struck the great masses of surf the first blow made a large hole in her side showing the black ribs at the second she plunged and turned over at the third the fragments of the hull floated upside down on the water, and then she swept past us, a confused mass of splintered timbers "A Woman in the Mackenzie Delta" Outing for October

EVERY DAY

Brings us new Stock bought under the new conditions which have brought on a great many lines---owing to the very low cost of raw materials and labor, coupled with anticipated and actual reductions of tariff on imports---A LOWNESS OF PRICE that is truly astonishing. We have been scaling our stock on hand and brought down all goods to the level of the new cost, and we believe that we give values now all through that cannot be obtained elsewhere. We therefore invite all our customers and friends in the full confidence that we can please them in what they want and save them money on current prices.

Dress Goods Values

Have never been so great, a drop of from 20 to 40 per cent on a great many of them on last seasons prices, more than the difference in tariff rates amount to The new tariff on imported woolens does not go into effect until Jan 1st, 95 Domestic manufacturers are limiting their output to actual demand, the scarcity that is inevitable will in a few weeks make prices higher, this will be found to be the case not only on dress goods but on many other of the home products The moral is obvious Our stock now complete, both in colors and blacks.

Ladies', Misses' and Children's Coats and Capes.

Probably in no department of our store will the decline in prices be so noticeable as in this department We have opened up a very handsome line of the newest creations of the coat designer, consisting of Tight-fitting Prince Alberts, Tight fitting Full back, Semi-tight and full Reefers in correct and different lengths to suit the height of the wearer—all made in best finish of the tailor's art We have some coats carried over at a price of one-third for mer price. An experienced fitter in charge, every garment must fit before it leaves us

Winter Underwear.

Our complete stock is now in, our assortment of kinds and values fully up to the sustaining of our reputation in this line. Have made additions in the way of a new style of combination underwear both white and natural grey, which is a great improvement over the old Children's Combination Suits. A few left of the children's and ladies' "odd lot" advertised at one-fourth off

FLANNELS and CANTON FLANNELS, a very noticeable difference in the price The celebrated Agwam Shrunk Flannel and Skirts, a full assortment lower prices; no better or more satisfactory flannel made

WOOL BLANKETS.

For several years past we have sold principally the product of the SUSQUEHANNA WOOLEN CO, and we attribute our success in blanket selling to that fact We buy them direct from the people who make them and have always been able to give values below the general market The lowness of prices this season will astonish you We gave our order for some specials that we confidently assert cannot be equalled or made again at the price. These blankets come in different sizes and weights, assorted borders, white, scarlet, light and medium dark greys Also CRIB and CRADLE BLANKETS

COTTON AND WOOL-MIXED BLANKETS in great variety, white and colored, price starts at 50 cts per pair

BED COMFORTABLES. We will show sateen covered Comforts, filled with good white cotton, extra large, extra heavy, at $1 25, worth $1 75, at $1 50, worth $2 Also some as low as 75 cts and $1, of equal value with the others

FUR CAPES.

We are showing now our winter line of Fur Capes in the new lengths and wide sweeps These goods were ordered in July and made up when skins were cheaper than they are to-day

Ox-Roast at Round-Top.

Notwithstanding the threatening weather of Saturday the gathering of Veterans and their friends at Round Top was unexpectedly large all parts of the county being well represented Many came early to see the process of roasting a steer whole which was done in first class style by Mr F J Rosensteel assisted by Mr Wm J Annen

Among the early arrivals was the Bendersville Post with their handsomely uniformed Drum Corps York Springs also sent a large delegation with a Drum Corps Both organizations enlivened the town as well as the Park with stirring music That the beef was toothsome is attested by the fact that it was entirely consumed along with large quantities of bread cakes, &c contributed by members and friends

The time for speaking having arrived, Hon Edw McPherson called the assembly to order and Rev I M Gardner of York Springs, offered prayer Col J A Stahle of York, was introduced and spoke at some length He was followed by Dr Underwood and Rev Gardner, both of York Springs Hon David Wills followed in a historical vein Chas S Duncan Esq was the next speaker and Mr McPherson closed with a few remarks It was announced that Judge McClean was absent on account of his going to McConnellsburg to hold the regular term of Court in Fulton county J H Strubinger and A W Millelsin Esqs sent their regrets

While the speeches were not of decided political character the candidates of both parties nearly all of whom were present embraced the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the people

The day was generally enjoyed and nothing but an occasional sprinkle of rain marred the pleasure

6th Pa. Cavalry.

On Saturday afternoon a special over the Reading brought a party of about 200 veterans and friends of the 6th Pa Cavalry regiment, from Philadelphia, on their annual tour of the Battlefield headquarters being at the Eagle. ## Sunday School Convention

The Sunday School convention announced to meet in the Presbyterian church at Hunterstown was called to order by the President Jeremiah Schriver Saturday afternoon Rev H C Shindle of New Chester led the convention in devotional exercise after which Rev W S VanCleve Pastor of the congregation welcomed the delegates in a neat address

The program arranged for the occasion was taken up in regular order The subject, "How should S S Superintendents Employ their Time?" was discussed by Mr Hugh Gilchrist of Gettysburg in a very excellent address How to prepare a Sunday School Lesson was ably presented by Rev Mr Shindle and G H Seiler, of Swatara Station

A resolution was offered by W A McIlhenny as follows

Resolved That we the members of this convention do organize ourselves for Sunday School work in Adams county and elect officers for this organization which is to be known as the Adams County Sunday School Association

It was explained by Mr Seiler President of the Fifth District of Pennsylvania and discussed by Revs Shindle Gilchrist Carver and VanCleve It was adopted and Revs Shindle and Carver and W A McIlhenny was appointed a committee to present officers for the county organization

Evening Session—Convention called to order by the president After an anthem by the choir devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev W A Carver of Gettysburg The committee on officers for county organization reported the following Pres Rev D F Kaylor of Arendtsville Sec Rev E E Hemner [illegible] New Oxford Treas W A McIlhenny Gettysburg Ten delegates were elected to attend the State convention which meets at Huntingdon from the 9th to 11th of October as follows Rev Hugh Gilchrist Gettysburg Rev M M Mickley of Arendtsville Rev E E Hemner New Oxford Rev D F Kaylor Arendtsville Rev John Mickley Fairfield Prof J W Thoman Abbottstown Rev W F Penn Gettysburg [illegible] New Oxford Wm Yeatts Hunterstown and E I Morris York Springs

After receiving reports from the different Sunday Schools of the District the subject The Place Temperance Should have in the Sunday School was taken up by J H Sprenkle Field Secretary of the State of New Cumberland in a highly entertaining address Next subject was What Should be the Sunday School Relations from Adults to the Sunday School Work It was ably discussed by Prof Fendel of Pennsylvania College Convention adjourned with the benediction by Rev P F Hemner to meet Sunday morning

Sunday Session—President J Schriver was in the chair Devotional exercises were conducted by Mr Geo H Seiler Mr Sprenkle discussed the question What Can the Sunday School do for the Young Men from 14 to 25 Years of Age After a hymn and collection Mr Seiler spoke on Why Should Parents be Identified with the Sunday School

The Children's Meeting proved to be a very interesting occasion

Mr Sprenkle opened the query box and found a dozen or more questions which he answered to the pleasure and profit of all Another song followed by the benediction by Rev E E Hemner brought to a close one of the most interesting and instructive conventions ever held in the district The sentiment that all seemed to be impressed with was that a better and more efficient work be done in the Sunday School

TREATMENT OF SOILS.

The Pro and Con of Fall Plowing.---The Old Fallow System.---Mulching---The Uses of Weeds.

We take the following from the Phila. Record. The article contains ideas which may be of use.

The management of the soil is at the present day a subject as important as the management of stock, and as the soil can gain or lose in fertility according to its treatment, the value of a farm depends upon the manner in which the soil has been cultivated. And not only does cultivation affect the soil, but the kind of crop grown influences it also, and changes its quality and texture to a certain extent. Many soils have been brought to a high degree of fertility with the aid of but a limited amount of manure, by growing certain crops, which not only cover the soil and protect it, but which also derive nitrogen from the air and add it to the plant food already existing in the soil. It is not only in the gain of fertility that the farm is enriched, but also in the prevention of loss by so managing the soil that even after the crop is removed a protection is given against rains, heat and frost. While these agents are at times beneficial and important, under certain conditions of the soil it is necessary to guard against losing that which was gained earlier in the season of growth.

It is an advantage to plow some soils later in the fall, but scientists are not unanimous in their opinions regarding this subject. It is advocated that there is too much exposure of the soil, by which large portions of soluble matter are lost. Nature covers the soil always, and never leaves it exposed. Under the fallow system, practiced in former years, when "resting" the land a year or two, by omitting crops, the soil gained in fertility, yet the plow was not used during the resting period. The gain in fertility was attributed to the scanty growth of herbage, which covered the almost barren fields, but the real gain was in the covering of the soil and the additional plant food brought down by the rains, and which was transformed into other substances by the indigenous herbage covering the soil as a mulch, and thus promoting the formation of humus. Learning from experience, it has occurred to many progressive farmers that mulching the soil is to protect it against loss as well as to add to its fertility.

Weeds are claimed to be Nature's recuperative crops, which repair the losses made by man. Weeds compel the indolent farmer to cultivate the soil to save his crops and they at once cover the soil with heavy growth as soon as the farmer ceases to have crops on the land, If the crops of the farmer do not cover the soil so as to afford complete protection, the weeds make an attempt to gain the mastery, but when the crop is heavy and dense the weeds are kept down. Different soils may be covered by different weeds, even the poorest soils having weeds that will thrive on them, though not suitable elsewhere. If the weeds are allowed to produce seed they become a crop, but if plowed under they add to the soil. The question then arises as to covering the soil in the winter. If the land is plowed and then seeded to a crop in the fall, the soil is protected, but if this is not done Nature still makes a further effort, with weeds that spring up late in the season, to cover the soil with a mulch. The subject is one that commends itself to the consideration of farmers, and though it is admitted that theory is at present in the ascendancy, yet it is believed that practical experiments will in future lead to a complete revolution in the treatment of soils after the regular crops have been removed. Shading the soil promotes fertility, and this gain occurs mostly in summer, but it must be conserved and retained in winter for use the following year.

IMPROVEMENTS---MONEY.

Thanking those who have responded to our request for money, we again ask our subscribers and patrons, who still owe us, to remember that the new building, now under way, must be paid for. Quite a large amount is still on our books, for subscription, advertising and printing which, if it were paid, would help us out considerably. Remember us therefore when you have any money on hand. Don't wait for bills because time is too limited just now for us to make them out. The payment of all bills due us, now, will be a great favor.

The Corn Crop.

The World's statistics collected from the twelve States that produce about 75 per cent. of the entire corn crop are encouraging in view of the depressed anticipation of the last month. They indicate a crop about two-thirds of the average, where a month ago the expectation was of less than half a crop. The production will amount to about 1,300,000,000 bushels, representing a wealth sufficient to pay off the entire national debt and buy up in addition the total gold product of the country for the year.

The Care of Harness.

Everybody who owns a set of harness knows that it will last twice as long if kept well greased and that a horse can work much better in it if soft, than if it is allowed to become hard and stiff. There is a great satisfaction also in having the team looking well. No matter how clean the horse may be he cannot present a handsome appearance if his harness is shabby. No matter whether the harness is of good quality or not, it can be kept black and soft.

The capacity of the horse for work depends much upon his harness. Stiff harness tires and worries him. Oiling the harness will make it flexible and will make it more durable. There is no better time for oiling harness than some stormy day on which outdoor work is forbidden by the weather. A mixture of three parts neat's-foot oil to one part of beef tallow, is a splendid application. A little lampblack may be added, to blacken the leather; and also a little castor oil, to prevent the mice from nibbling. But the best way to prevent the mice from nibbling the harness is to hang it in a tight closet and keep two or three good mousers about the barn. When the harness is being oiled, is the proper time to make any needed repairs. This work also can be done indoors on stormy days. It is certainly much better to do it then, and not to have vexations breaks when plowing is pressing to be done. Very nearly all the repairing that is necessary can be done at home. It will pay to have on hand at all times a supply of linen thread, wax, a half dozen assorted needles, awls, and especially an assortment of copper rivets. Strengthening weak places will not only avoid vexatious breakages when one is very busy, but may also avoid runaways, not a few of which are caused by the breaking of the harness.

An Australian farmer reports a crop of seven hundred and fifty bushels of Algerian oats from ten acres of land. Another one eclipse this by a crop of eighty bushels to the acre.

ALL ABOUT THE FARM.

Containing some Valuable Suggestions.

IT is doubtful if any farmer has a sufficiency of manure for all of his crops, and the failure to use fertilizers liberally causes them a loss. Leaving aside the question of the superiority of manure or fertilizers, the point is how much manure is on the farm. Plants must have food, and if the farmer is too economical in the purchase of fertilizers he may save too much in that direction and lose much more by not supplying his crop with the needed plant foods.

THIS is the season for preparing the asparagus bed. Cut down the seed stalks and use manure six inches thick on the bed. Next spring you will have large stalks and plenty of them.

THE profits depend on the condition in which the field is left after the crop is removed. If the crop has been a large one, the land may be poorer than before; and this loss of fertility lessens the profits, as a larger amount of manure or fertilizer must be applied next season. It is difficult to arrive at a correct knowledge of the profit derived in a single year, but with the keeping of strict accounts something should be known in three years. If the yields decrease, the farmer should not hesitate to procure fertilizers if his manure heap is small.

THE seed corn for next year cannot be too dry. Let the select ears remain on the stalk until the leaves turn yellow and the kernels are hard and dry, then hang the ears up in a dry place.

SCIENCE has disproved the rural belief that thunder sours milk. It is now known that the souring results from a fungous growth, and that this fungus is peculiarly fatal to nursing children. The old-time rural belief was that the concussion from thunder acted mechanically upon the milk, and first soured and then solidified it. It happens that milk sours during or just after thunder storms because the atmospheric conditions then prevailing are usually of a kind favorable to the rapid development of the fungus growth that sours milk.

IF trees are to be planted in the fall, the earlier it is done the better, provided, of course, the wood is thoroughly matured. The tree may be taken up even before the frost has stripped it of its leaves, provided this work is done by hand. If planted out in September, while the soil is still warm, new roots will put forth, and the tree will become well established for winter. It will not do to strip the leaves from trees that are not to be transplanted, as it will start the buds at their base, which ought not to grow until next spring. But the check of transplanting prevents any danger of this, and in a late fall may be an advantage, as it prevents the premature swelling of buds that often makes the tree winter kill.

BETTER hire a little more help than to keep the boys out of school to help cut up or gather corn.

IT is well to remember that it is muscle rather than fat that is needed by breeding stock, as fat leads to loss of energy, if not of health and vigor.

FILL your hotbeds with litter in the fall so that the ground will not freeze. Replace this with manure in the spring and the planting can proceed without delay.

IF not already done, it is now time to cut out all the old stalks among the raspberries and blackberries. Leave but three or four of the strongest of the new canes and treat the rest as weeds.

To preserve the fertility of the soil, says the National Stockman, three methods are being practiced by our best farmers, viz.: Rotation of crops, application of commercial fertilizers and the use of barnyard manure.

IF it is desired to increase the depth of the soil, do not turn up the cold subsoil with a heavy plow, but go an inch deeper than usual, and take in another inch next year. Whenever the subsoil is turned up, however, no matter how little, give the field an application of lime, as it will exert a chemical effect on the soil and assist in bringing it into better condition for plants.

CLEAN seed is very important, and the farmer should not rely entirely on the seedsman. Examine the seed with a strong glass. It is less labor to pick out foreign seeds than to work the field over to destroy the undesirable plants that will surely put in an appearance after the use of such seed.

WHEN young and immature stock is used for breeding purposes year after year, and the older animals sold, there is a liability of loss of stamina. The best specimens are procured from matured parents.

CROWDED class rooms in the public schools of all parts of Pennsylvania is a problem which now puzzles boards of control to solve satisfactorily. No matter how school buildings are enlarged and how additions are made to the corps of teachers, it only needs a few months to show that more room is needed to accommodate pupils, and a number more of teachers required to take charge of them. This growth of the public schools of the state is as marvelous as it is gratifying, and as it proceeds must produce results of the most magnificent character in the development of a very high class of men and women.

A BORN GENTLEMAN.—A small boy was at a table where his mother was not near to take care of him, and a lady next to him volunteered her services.

"Let me cut your steak for you," she said: "if I can cut it the way you like," she added, with some degree of doubt.

"Thank you," the boy responded, accepting her courtesy; "I shall like it the way you cut it, even if you do not cut it the way I like it."—Detroit Free Press.

THE DISCOVERY SAVED HIS LIFE.—Mr. G. Caillouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. Kings New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at J. M. Huber's Drug Store. (2)

Kicking Cows.

If the animal is handled kindly from calfhood, and the proper kind of person milks her—one who has sense enough to control his temper—there will be very little probability of the animal developing the kicking habit. If the cow's udder is sore, or if one handles tender teats too roughly, the cow is liable to kick. If she does, it will be wise to handle her more kindly and gently, lest she repeat the kicking so many times that it becomes a habit, for if it develops into a habit, nothing may serve to cure her. Young heifers, which have just dropped their calves, may kick occasionally at the beginning; and if the milker kicks her back, or strikes, or scolds her roughly, the chances are that the evil will be aggravated, and the cow ruined. Gentleness and kindness with dairy cows is the best plan to avoid having kicking cows. But there are frequent instances where the kicking propensity seems to be transmitted in the breeding from dam to offspring, and in such cases it will be a hard matter to effect a cure. As a rule, however, kicking cows are the result of ignorant and brutal treatment by those having them in charge, and entrusted with their training.

Keeping Eggs.

How to keep eggs fresh is a question that should be prominent in the minds of poultry keepers. It may, perhaps, be objected that an egg can not be preserved so as to retain the natural delicacy of flavor of a really fresh egg, which soon passes away. Still, eggs can be preserved in a manner to leave them excellent eating, and hardly distinguishable from fresh ones, except, perhaps, by experts. If eggs are to be kept for a few weeks only, the matter is very easily arranged, a cool place being all that is necessary, together with a board pierced with holes just large enough to let the eggs stand upright without passing through. Upon this board the eggs should be placed, broad end downward, so that the air space may not enlarge to the same extent as when the reverse way, as they would not be the same evaporation of moisture from the egg. Wire latticing, if well galvanized, can be substituted with advantage for this board or shelf. In Germany eggs are kept sweet for considerable periods by being buried in fresh bran; or a preparation of lime and water is made by adding twenty gallons of water to four gallons of slacked lime, to which about a gallon of salt is added. When the water has taken up as much of the lime as it can possibly dissolve, immerse the eggs in the liquid so that they are quite covered, about two or three inches of water intervening between the outer air and the topmost layer. A little lime must be added now and again, as the old lot loses its strength or gets absorbed. Too much, however, should not be added, else the whole may turn into a solid mass. Water should also be poured in occasionally, as the quantity gradually becomes reduced by the steady absorbtion.—American Agriculturist.

If You Want to Be Loved.

Don't find fault.

Don't contradict people even if you are sure you are right.

Don't be inquisitive about the affairs of even your most intimate friends.

Don't underrate anything because you don't possess it.

Don't believe that everybody else in the world is happier than you.

Don't conclude that you have never had any opportunities in life.

Don't believe all the evil you hear.

Don't repeat gossip, even if it does interest a crowd.

Don't go untidy on the plea that everybody knows you.

Don't be rude to your inferiors in social position.

Don't over or under dress.

Don't express a positive opinion unless you perfectly understand what you are talking about.

Don't get in the habit of vulgarizing life by making light of the sentiment of it.

Don't jeer at everybody's religious beliefs.

Don't try to be anything else but a gentlewoman—and that means a woman who has consideration for the whole world and whose life is governed by the golden rule: "Do unto others as you would be done by."

THE BEST.

The best husband is the one who realizes that his wife is an individual.

The best wife is she who has spirit and common sense, as well as affection.

The best father is the one who makes chums of his children.

The best child feels for its parents neither time nor awe, and is able to respect them without trying to do so.

The best mother-in-law is the other fellow's. At least the jokers say so but it isn't true.

The best home is that one where love is not crowded out either by proverty, riches or selfishness.

The best religion is that of a good man, no matter by what name you call it.—N. Y. Recorder.

HIS NEEDS.—"Aaron's boy would do tip-top if he had a string long enough," said one neighbor to another.

"I don't know what use a business man can put a string to," said neighbor Number Two.

"Well, if he could tie up all the loose ends that he leaves dangling, tie himself down to work, tie his pocket-book together, and then tie his tongue so it wouldn't wag so busy, he'd be as useful a man as we have got in town. But I doubt if it can be done. It would take considerable string."

THE death is reported on a South African ostrich farm of a male ostrich named Saul, which was known to be at least fifty-five years old. At one time the plumes from a single plucking of this bird sold for more than one hundred dollars.

INQUIRER.—Does a fish diet strengthen the brain? Philosopher—Perhaps not; but going fishing seems to invigorate the imagination.

THE MODERN WAY.—Little Ethel—"Mamma, I wish you'd wash Willie Prettie's face."

Mamma—"The idea! He's not my little boy. I have nothing to do with him."

Little Ethel—"But I have. We's engaged and I want to kiss him."—Pearson's Weekly.

Dr. Schenck's

Mandrake Pills have a value as a household remedy far beyond the power of language to describe. The family can hardly be true to itself that does not keep them on hand for emergencies.

MANDRAKE

Is the only vegetable substitute for that dangerous mineral, MERCURY, and while its action as a curative is fully equal, it possesses none of the perilous effects.

In Constipation, Mandrake acts upon the bowels without disposing them to subsequent Costiveness.

No remedy acts so directly on the liver, nothing so speedily cures Sick Headache, Sour Stomach and Biliousness as these # PILLS.

For sale by all Druggists. Price 25 cts. per box; 3 boxes for 65 cts., or sent by mail, postage free, on receipt of price. Dr. J. H. Schenck & Son, Phila. July 18, 1893. tf
